

StAGES: The Integral Developmental Model

Join us in Boulder at The Integral Center on Sept 27-28, 2014, 9-5 each day, for an Introduction to the StAGES Model of adult development for therapists, coaches, healers, parents, social workers, spiritual directors, mentors, and anyone seeking personal growth or spiritual development.

Facilitated by Terri O'Fallon, PhD, Pacific Integral's Co-Founder and the creator of the StAGES model, and Kim Barta, M.A., Kim Barta Therapy, the StAGES Model will be presented in a dynamic two-day educational/experiential workshop at The Integral Center in Boulder, CO.

StAGES is a groundbreaking new theory and assessment methodology for human development, created by Terri O'Fallon, Ph.D. The model grows out of Terri's decades of experience in Education and years of research on development at Pacific Integral. This new model reveals important new understandings about how human beings grow throughout life and helps us each make sense of where we are in our development, personally and professionally.

Practically, it gives us a roadmap for our individual and collective, human potential.

The model has been statistically grounded to correlate with the Sentence Completion Test as advanced by Susanne Cook Greuter which is the most widely-used and researched test of adult human development. StAGES validates three new, later stages of development; it is the first integrally based developmental model, incorporating quadrants, states, lines and types. As such, StAGES provides statistical support for Ken Wilber's integral theory. It reveals a natural sequence of deep "vertical" structures, as well as iterating, wave-like patterns of development.

Terri will begin the program with an introduction to the new model's evolutionary trajectory and new developmental theoretical underpinnings. Through her introductory presentation, Terri takes participants on a journey of insight and experience beginning with the first stages of human development that progress systematically to later levels through the reaches of development into the advanced stages and tiers.

To provide participants with the richest possible experience, each level will be presented intellectually, interactively, and experientially. Kim follows each stage with practical application and use of the model in a psychotherapeutic/coaching practice. This will include how the StAGES Model is therapeutically useful for treating trauma, parenting, and generally for personal growth.
